

The Federal Communications Commission

Dear The Federal Communications Commission,

As an infrequent residential user of long distance and cell phone service I am opposed to the Universal Service Fund (USF). I use my prepaid cell service for emergencies and security and feel it would not be fair to burden infrequent users with an increase in their cost of service. I am on a retirement income and cancelled a regular cell service because of the cost and went to a prepay service to be able to afford cell phone service. I fear many people like me will be forced to give up their cell phone service if USF is instituted.

I strongly urge that you reject USF.

Sincerely,

Ray Hartman
